09:00-10:30	Women's Walking Tours
	Tour 1: Katzenblut und Perlenbro­t – Verborgene Geschichten aus der Basler Medizin (TINGUELY-BRUNNEN) German Sara Thomma & Meret Tiburzi of Frauenstadtrundgang Basel Starting Point: Tinguely-Brunnen, Theaterplatz Basel End Point: Blutspendezentrum, Hebelstrasse 10

How did nuns in the Steinenkloster alleviate menstrual discomfort? Where is the oldest pharmacy in Basel located? How do racism, sexism, and class continue to shape medical knowledge today? Discover how activists in recent decades have addressed gaps in the healthcare system, whether in the ‘Schliimgrüpli’ or the first residential home for people with AIDS. From ancient pharmaceutical knowledge and medieval monastery gardens to “hysterical women” and the development of modern hospitals in the 19th century, we explore who created medical knowledge and who had access to it.

Please kindly note that the number of participants is limited. Additionally, this tour includes stairs, inclines, curbs and cobblestones

The traces of colonialism are still visible in Basel today. Basel was a transit point for emigration to the colonies. Patrician families became richer through the trade in colonial goods and enslaved people. On the city tour, you will learn not only about the colonial entanglements, but also about how these characterize Basel today. We look at current issues in a historical context: Should Basel return cultural heritage? To what extent are adverts by aid organizations racist? What does the image of Switzerland have to do with colonialism?

Please kindly note that the number of participants is limited. Additionally, this tour includes stairs, inclines, tram tracks, curbs and cobblestones.

Philosophie du viol – une archéologie du déni
Il s’agit dans cette intervention de s’appuyer sur la bibliothèque des philosophies féministes pour problématiser le viol comme ce qui constitue l’une des dimensions principielles du déni de réalité. A distance des interprétations psychanalytiques de la notion, une philosophie et une historiographie sociale et politique qui fait retour sur les héritages de la modernité pourrait s’interroger sur les processus de déréalisation qu’initient ou qu’entérinent l’ordinaire du viol.

In this keynote, Elsa Dorlin will draw on the library of feminist philosophies to problematize rape as one of the principal dimensions of denial of reality. Distancing itself from psychoanalytic interpretations, a socio-political philosophy and historiography, which returns to the heritages of modernity, could interrogate the processes of de-realization that initiate and endorse the ordinary of rape.

Please note: This workshop takes place at a different location than the conference venue: Klybeckstrasse 1b, 4057 Basel. It is organized by the SAGS research network “rag”. The workshop can host a maximum of 25 participants.

In this exchange forms of knowledge production are explored in a creative way to examine the connection between scientific and artistic epistemes. We therefore come together in the seemingly private space of the kitchen to engage in dialogue and cook together and thus continue the tradition of ‘kitchen politics’. The simultaneity of cooking as care work and speaking in solidarity – as caring knowledge production – forms the performative framework of networking.

Beyond Doomscknowledge. For a cyber_trans_feminism

Once upon a time, no one on the Internet knew you were a dog. Today, your period tracker may out you as trans or abortion seeking, your doomsscrolling will fill the “Kill Cloud” (Ling/Westmoreland) with more and more data, and your open access publications will be harvested to train commercial AI applications. Data doubles, data derivatives or data shadows determine what news we get to see and thus shape what we perceive as our reality. The distinction between data bodies and data about bodies has become blurred. In current technecologies, data promises absolute objectivity. It is interpreted as an immanent digital reality rather than as knowledge produced through material-semiotic practices. With these promises of truth and objectivity, new forms of governance have become possible. On the one hand, data abstracted from bodies, body data, become the statistical basis of biopolitical modes of governance and, on the other hand, data doubles, data bodies, become the targets of precisely these forms of governance. At the same time, AI slob, AI image production, and cyberlibertarian forms of fascization seem to have abandoned truth claims or theories of objectivity altogether. In this talk, I will scroll through artistic, cyberfeminist, scholarly, and activist interventions into these algorithmic regimes of power, looking for technecological forms of care and dividual forms of desubjectivation.

15:00–16:15	Roundtable “Netpolitics: Circulating Emancipatory Ideas Online” (LECTURE HALL 001) English Chair: Bianca Prietl (University of Basel, CH) Discussants: Katrin Köppert (Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin, D), Pinar Tuzcu (Queen’s University, CAN), Francesca Schmidt (Netzforma* e.V., D)

This roundtable discussion focuses the sociotechnical conditions, possibilities and ambivalences of circulating emancipatory ideas online. It takes up discussions of so-called netpolitics that have since the 1990s engaged with the possibilities provided by the internet and related net-technologies for advancing feminist goals and emancipatory politics, especially by integrating artistic and activist interventions. Today, this means foremost to take a look at platform based social media and the ways that emancipatory ideas circulate via these current-day net-technologies. #metoo might be the most prominent example of so-called hashtag-feminism, symbolizing the possibilities of developing positions critical of patriarchal and heteronormative power asymmetries and mobilizing large populations against the ensuing violence. At the same time, women and people not conforming to binary gender norms are especially prone to encountering hate speech online due to their gender or sexuality, while social media providers are disinvesting from diversity programs and content moderation rules that were supposed to counteract different forms of online violence. Although social media have been criticized for impeding differentiated and fine-tuned debates, while favoring highly emotionalized and polarizing messages, they are key to today’s netpolitics. The roundtable brings analytical perspectives on feminist netpolitics today in a dialogue with first-hand experiences in circulating emancipatory ideas online.

BOTH DAYS

Video: Queer Martyrs (MEETING ROOM 206)

English

Video Installation: Sébastien Mitra (independent artist, Basel, CH)

This installation features a three-channel video installation, exploring the idea of queer martyrdom, as well as the way martyrdom is created and embodied. The installation depicts the final moments of martyr St Sebastian, this time as a trans* person. The installation focuses on the triangle of interaction which creates the martyrdom, each channel showing a different point of view: the archer (the persecutor), St Sebastian (the martyr), and Irene, the healer (the witness). Each of these characters is portrayed by queer people. The installation interweaves documentary and fiction, in which these three figures are asked questions and discuss queerness, the queer/trans* body, embodied knowledges, and at the same time play out the scene of martyrdom.

Mujeres que Luchan – Experiencing Research-Creation Through Feminist Artivism (SEMINAR ROOM 212) English Chair: Emilie Arias (University of Geneva, CH)

This immersive workshop introduces the Mujeres que Luchan project, which uses feminist activist practices – such as collage, kintsugi, and el tendadero – to explore the transmission of feminist knowledge beyond academic spaces. Through collective creation and dialogue, participants will engage with embodied forms of resistance and reflect on epistemic justice and situated knowledge.

FemWiss (1983-2004): Exhibition with information stand (FLOOR 2 (CORRIDOR))

Founded in 1983, FemWiss – Verein Feministische Wissenschaft Schweiz – is an independent national organization dedicated to promoting gender equality and advancing science policy. FemWiss is also committed to supporting women’s and gender studies at Swiss universities. The exhibition shows parts of the FemWiss archive such as newsletters (1983-2004), newspaper clippings and minutes from the founding period.

Audiowalk: f_r_iction in the space be_tween

German phonetics, partly English, partly Turkish, complex and poetic language

Starting Point: (KOLLEGIENHAUS)

Time: 17:00

Artists: Jirotka (artist) & Linda Jiayun Gao-Lenders (Justus Liebig University Giessen, D)

The walk is based on feminist forays, so-called scores (instructions for action) for appropriating public (urban) space in a feminist way or critically engage with it. With the method of counter-reading, counteracting the movement of European women with authors from the from the Global South, we try to translate decolonial theories into artistic practice.
